The Unser Boulevard Trail travels south along Albuquerque's western flank from Petroglyph National Monument and Indian Petroglyph State Park to Blake Road. Along the way, travelers will enjoy desert landscapes and views of the Sandia Mountains. The trail itself is paved asphalt, and while it functions mainly as a wide sidepath along its namesake roadway, it provides a nice path for pedestrians and cyclists who don't mind frequent road crossings. At the southern end, the trail connects to the Amole Arroyo Trail, which heads north through the southwest neighborhoods of Albuquerque.
