The Legacy Trail treks an 11-mile paved path through northern areas of Lexington, Kentucky. Running north-to-south, between the Kentucky Horse Park and Northside Lexington, this well-maintained, multi-use pathway features public art installations as it traverses parks, farmland, and industrial spaces.

About the Route

The Legacy Trail's northern endpoint is at Kentucky Horse Park (Lexington), home to a 1,200-acre working farm, equestrian sporting grounds, museums and horse shows. The northern endpoint is at the northwestern corner of the park, from which the trail heads south to hug the park's western and southern edges, adjacent to I-75, and Iron Works Pike, respectively. Most trail users originating at Kentucky Horse Park will enter at the trailhead near the park entrance on Iron Works Pike.

Continuing south, the trail follows the Cane Run creek as it traverses farmlands. Reaching the interstate again, it runs adjacent for a short distance until a tunnel crosses south underneath. On the southern side of the co-marked stretch of I-64 and I-75, the trail continues to parallel the freeway for 0.75 miles eastwards until reaching to a large circular industrial building. Here, a 1-mile spur splits from the main trail towards Coldstream Dog Park. The main trail turns south and heads past the Coldstream Research Park.

After running for 0.75 miles east adjacent to Citation Blvd, the trail begins to weave through more developed industrial areas. It crosses Kentucky Route 4 on a dedicated lane of a bridge shared with Development Dr., before snaking south through a complex of delivery warehouses.

The Legacy Trail's southern endpoint is at Setzer Wy & W Loudon Ave (Lexington), adjacent to the North Lexington Family YMCA. The trail connects directly to the Hope Center Trail, which in turn connects to the Coolavin Rail Trail, to reach Coolavin Park, offering another 1 mile of trail further south into Lexington.

Connections

At the trail's southern end, travelers can connect to the Hope Center Trail, which in turn connects to the Coolavin Rail Trail, to reach Coolavin Park and the Transylvania University Athletics Complex.

Trail History

The Legacy Trail came about as part of a community planning effort to create "legacy" projects in Lexington that the city would continue to benefit from after it hosted the Alltech/FEI World Equestrian Games. The trail opened in 2010, just
