Red Canyon Bicycle Trail

Utah

The Red Canyon Bicycle Trail, running for almost 13 paved miles, is appropriately named. This must-do path travels through scenic red

Canyon Pines Campground. Numerous rustic hiking trails, including the Thunder Mountain Trail and the Castle Bridge Trail, can be accessed from the trail.

Connections

At the western end of the trail along Utah State Route 63, connect to the Bryce Canyon Shared Use Path to explore Bryce Canyon National Park.

The Red Canyon Bicycle Trail, running for almost 13 paved miles, is appropriately named. This must-do path travels through scenic red canyons in an area referred to as "Little Bryce," after the nearby Bryce Canyon National Park.

About the Route

The trail offers a non-motorized alternative to the busy State Route (Scenic Byway) 12, both winding through the Red Canyon in Utah's Dixie National Forest to a high mountain plateau. Surrounding the trail are towering cliffs and scattered pine forest.

There are multiple campgrounds along the route, including the Red Canyon Campground and the Bryce
