Harrison South Rail Trail

West Virginia

The Harrison South Rail Trail extends south from Veteran's Memorial Park and the Louis A. Johnson VA Medical Center in bikes than road bikes, although it is still passable.

The northern end of the trail, Clarksburg is a destination hub of rail-trails, where the Harrison South Rail Trail, North Bend Rail Trail and West Fork River Trail (via the Harrison North Rail Trail) all terminate and, although they do not connect directly, replicate the traffic brought by the railroads in the 19th and early 20th centuries.

The Harrison South Rail Trail extends south from Veteran's Memorial Park and the Louis A. Johnson VA Medical Center in Clarksburg to the rural community of Lost Creek. The trail was built on a railbanked CSX corridor that parallels Browns Creek and County Road 25.

Running for over 10 miles, the trail passes farmland set against the backdrop of the rolling hills that make this part of West Virginia exceptionally beautiful. Several restored trestles along the way cross the snaking course of Browns Creek, which is never far out of sight. In Lost Creek, the trail ends just past South St.

A short section along the middle of the route, in between Mt. Clare and Lost Creek, has a rougher surface composed of gravel and grass, more suited to mountain
