approximately 200 feet, then make another left before the traffic circle. This will take you back under the street and past the tennis courts.

If you go north at the traffic circle, you can also hop on the Winston-Salem Strollway, a 1.2-mile rail-trail that parallels Old Salem Road into downtown.

Stay on the greenway and you'll travel between Winston-Salem University and Civitan Park and through Reynolds Park with its 18-hole golf course.

The trail's eastern end is at Salem Lake, the city's second largest source of water and a popular place for boating and fishing. Take the 7-mile loop around the lake for outstanding views of the water.

The Salem Creek Greenway follows the tree-lined creek for just over 5 miles through southern Winston-Salem.

From the western end, the trail begins off the parking lot for the Marketplace Mall. From there, you will soon pass through Washington Park, a 75-acre recreational area with athletic fields, picnic pavilions, a dog park and a playground.

Once out of the park, you will reach S Broad Street; follow it north on the sidewalk, then go east on W Salem Avenue around the traffic circle to connect to the trail again.

Or, to avoid the traffic circle: just before you reach S Broad Street, take the fork to the right under the street; cross the large wooden bridge and follow the sidewalk to the left for
