The Dillon Reservoir Recpath offers an 18.1-mile scenic route along the shore of the Dillon Reservoir in the White River National Forest, connecting the towns of Frisco and Dillon. The trail curves around the majority of the reservoir between the reservoir's southern tip at the intersection of Swan Mountain Rd & Goodale Rd (Breckenridge) and Sapphire Point Overlook (Swan Mountain Rd, Dillon).

From the intersection of Swan Mountain Rd & Goodale Rd, the trail heads northwest through Frisco Adventure Park. Curving north through Frisco, the route parallels Summit Boulevard and the western edge of the reservoir.

Heading north out of Frisco, the trail parallels Dillon Dam Road. Enjoy exceptional views of the lake and Keystone Mountain. At Point Dillon Park, connect to the Blue River Trail to reach downtown Silverthorne. Meandering east along the north edge of the reservoir, the trail heads through Dillon and curves south to follow the eastern edge of the reservoir until just south of Sapphire Point Overlook (Swan Mountain Rd, Dillon). This portion overlaps with the Swan Mountain Recpath.

At its southwest end near the reservoir's southern tip, the trail connects to the Frisco-Farmers Korner Recpath and the Blue River Recpath to Breckenridge. Follow the Frisco-Farmers Korner Recpath west along the south side of town to connect to the Ten Mile Canyon Recpath, a rail-trail with stunning views that heads south to Copper Mountain.

On the eastern side of the reservoir, the trail connects to the Snake River Recpath which heads west to Keystone.
