Hartford Riverwalk

Connecticut

The Hartford Riverwalk is a charming network of paved pathways for cyclists and pedestrians that runs along the banks of the Riverfront Plaza, the centerpiece of the riverfront park system, offers an outdoor performance space with a variety of public art installations, and in late summer makes for a great place to watch the annual Dragon Boat Festival on the river.

The Hartford Riverwalk is a charming network of paved pathways for cyclists and pedestrians that runs along the banks of the Connecticut River through the state capital. The trail provides an off-road link between various destinations along the river, from the city's Riverside Park, to the Mortensen Riverfront Plaza, and down to the Charter Oak Landing in the south. In addition to tying together these recreational amenities and popular sightseeing locales, the trail feeds in to the lengthy Charter Oak Greenway, which continues all the way east past Manchester.

The Riverwalk makes for one of the best ways to experience Hartford's historic downtown riverfront, with trail users walking or riding along the path, accompanied by people boating up and down the river. The Mortensen
