Naugatuck River Greenway

Connecticut

The Naugatuck River Greenway will one day span 44 miles from Torrington to Derby in western Connecticut, but is currently open

Continuing up the river, you'll find another segment in the community of Naugatuck, which traces the tree-lined eastern bank of the Naugatuck River between Maple and Bridge streets. The trail traverses Linden Park and offers access to the park's many amenities.

The 2-mile section in Waterbury runs from Platts Mill Road & South Main Street to Eagle Street & South Main Street. Enjoy views of the river along the route and an access trail leads to the river for fishing and kayaking/canoeing. There are several businesses along the pathway including restaurants and lodging. In some sections the trail provides access to the rear of businesses. The trail features an outdoor theater, picnic tables both covered and open, and bike racks. The restroom has been installed but will not open until the spring of 2023.

In Watertown, the trail follows the Steele Brook between French Street and Echo Lake Road. At the north end of the trail, cross the road and you can access parking and other amenities in Deland Field.

The Naugatuck River Greenway will one day span 44 miles from Torrington to Derby in western Connecticut, but is currently open in a few short, disconnected segments totaling just over 7 miles.

The southernmost segment is the Derby Greenway, spanning just under 2 miles, paralleling the Naugatuck and Housatonic rivers.

North from there, the segment in Beacon Falls offers a scenic route along the river that is paved and well-lighted. Just north of the trail's end at the Depot Street Bridge, lies Volunteer Park, a pleasant place to stop and take in the views. The trail will one day continue farther through the town, including a section in the Naugatuck State Forest.
