Lower McAlpine Creek, McMullen Creek & Four Mile Creek Greenways

North Carolina

On the southern outskirts of Charlotte, a series of connected greenways along creeks form a horseshoe-shaped path of nearly 6

Also part of the Mecklenburg County Greenway System, a different Four Mile Creek Greenway follows the same creek about 6 miles farther upstream.

On the southern outskirts of Charlotte, a series of connected greenways along creeks form a horseshoe-shaped path of nearly 6 miles. The pathway is primarily paved with wooden boardwalks over creeks and wetlands; a section of the McMullen Creek Greenway (the trail's northwestern end) is gravel.

About the Route

Along the way, watch the treetops for great blue herons, warblers, and woodpeckers. Trailside signs point out wildlife and plants that have made the well-shaded waterways their home. Although the trail feels quiet and peaceful, it is easily accessible from the surrounding neighborhoods.
