The nearly 8 miles of the Ohio River Trail (OH) (open in three disconnected segments) are open along the Ohio river's northern shore.

About the Route

The westernmost section of the trail links Cincinnati's professional sports stadiums, and a number of other parks, including T.M. Berry International Friendship Park, which is named for the city's first African American mayor.

Another section of trail takes trail users between the Schmidt Boat Ramp and Ballfields and the California Woods Nature Park and takes users along the river past the Cincinnati Municipal Airport where it shares part of the route with the Lunken Airport Trail.

A third section of trail (also the easternmost) takes trail users between Coney Island Park and Riverbend Ampitheatre, both situated along the banks of the Ohio River. The route currently meets its easternmost endpoint at a Marathon Gas near Five Mile Rd. but there are plans to extend and connect the route.

Connections

In Sawyer Point Park, the trail connects with the Newport Southbank Bridge \(Purple People Bridge\), which takes trail users across the river to Kentucky.

The Ohio River Trail (OH) overlaps with the Lunken Airport Bike Path.

The Ohio River Trail is part of the 300+ mile Ohio to Erie Trail, an epic trail network that links the Ohio River in Cincinnati to Lake Erie in Cleveland.
