The Azalea Trail offers glimpses of nature as it follows Hurricane Creek through the heart of Lufkin, an small east Texas city. Along the way, there are views of native plants and small gardens, and may see numerous bird species, including owls, woodpeckers, and warblers.

Although just under 2 miles, the trail connects two well-loved community parks. On its north end, much of Kiwanis Park is wooded. Here, there is a disc golf course and picnic areas. On its southern end, the larger Grace Dunne Richardson Park offers a wealth of recreational opportunities, including a playground, basketball and volleyball courts, and a soccer field.

The trail also offers access to two retail areas: Angelina Village Shopping Center and the Lufkin Mall.
