The Milford Trail connects the Village of Milford with the popular Kensington Metropark in Oakland County. The winding trail offers plenty of scenery as it travels through woodlands and wetlands.

In the north, the trail provides access to Milford's YMCA and skirts the edge of Hubbell Pond. After passing over a dam, the Milford Trail parallels General Motors Road for a short distance, just east of the car company's sprawling proving grounds. The historic site, still in use by General Motors, was the first facility dedicated to automobile testing when it opened in 1924.

At the trail's southern endpoint, it meets the Kensington Metropark Trail, which continues into the popular park and around scenic Kent Lake.
