For more than 7 miles, The Angola trail winds through the heart of its namesake city, which sits in the northeast corner of Indiana, just 10 miles from the bordering states of Michigan and Ohio. The paved pathway connects Pokagon State Park, just north of the city, and Commons Park, to the south. Benches, constructed by Eagle Scouts, are available all along the route.

A recent connection to Pokagon State Park, about 3 miles north of E. Wendell Jacob Avenue has been completed. The state park sprawls over more than 1,200 acres and offers wetlands, lakes, and historical buildings to explore.
