Stony Run Trail

Maryland

Baltimore's Stony Run Trail follows an old Maryland and Pennsylvania Railroad line through nearly 3 miles of wooded

The trail intersects or abuts Loyola University, Johns Hopkins University, 3 city parks, and 5 schools, providing a great way to access these local institutions and leafy Olmsted-designed communities while enjoying a walk along the stream. Recently, local environmental organization Blue Water Baltimore has led an initiative to install native plants along the stream, which has brought renewed attention to the trail.

Connections

At the confluence of the two streams, the Stony Run Trail meets the Jones Falls Trail.

Baltimore's Stony Run Trail follows an old Maryland and Pennsylvania Railroad line through nearly 3 miles of wooded stream valleys and small parks, providing a quiet escape from the hustle and bustle of city life. The unique urban trail sits on the former rail bed next to Stony Run, which flows into the longer Jones Falls.

About the Route

The Stony Run Trail passes through 15 residential neighborhoods, including Roland Park, Hampden, Remington, and Tuscany-Canterbury, providing residents with quick and easy access to this tree-lined oasis. It is not uncommon to see families out for a stroll, college students going for a jog or nature lovers glimpsing the great blue herons wading in the stream.
