Wilbur Wright Trail will one day extend from New Castle (in Henry County) to Losantville (in Randolph County), where it will connect

Wilbur Wright Trail will one day extend from New Castle (in Henry County) to Losantville (in Randolph County), where it will connect to the Cardinal Greenway, the longest rail-trail in Indiana. The route will primarily follow the former Pennsylvania Railroad through picturesque farmland. The multi-use, paved trail is named after Henry County native and famed aviator Wilbur Wright.

Construction will be in five phases; the first opened in September 2013 and the second opened in 2017. Currently, the paved trail spans 3.1 miles in New Castle and is the city's first trail. It connects the recreational amenities of the Wilbur Wright Fish & Wildlife Area at its northern end and the Henry County YMCA at its southern end.
