Black Creek Greenway

North Carolina

Notice: There are currently detours in place for the closed sections of the Black Creek Greenway. The detours utilize parts of the the lake. And, just south of the county park, trail users will pass North Cary Park with its playground, climbing boulders and sports fields.

The trail heads south from here, mostly skirting through suburban backyards until reaching its southern endpoint at Fred G. Bond Metro Park.

The 310-acre metro park features a number of attractions including a boathouse, challenge course, playground, athletic fields, and more.

Connections

At its southern end, the trail reaches Fred G. Bond Metro Park, where it connects to the White Oak Creek Greenway.

This trail is part of the East Coast Greenway, a vast and developing trail network from Maine to Florida.

Notice: There are currently detours in place for the closed sections of the Black Creek Greenway. The detours utilize parts of the Weston Greenway and the Crabtree Creek Greenway. Visit the trail's website for the detour map.

At 7.1 miles, the Black Creek Greenway is one of Cary's longest and most popular trails. The paved pathway connects several parks, schools, and shopping and dining areas.

About the Route

Starting at the trail's northern end, at Lake Crabtree County Park, trail users are treated to recreational opportunities abound, including mountain biking, hiking, volleyball, and picnicking, as well as fishing and boating in
