seamlessly meets the Ten Mile Canyon Recpath. Take the paved rail-trail north along Tenmile Creek and I-70 to reach the small town of Frisco and additional trails in the Summit County Recreational Pathway System.

The Vail Pass Recpath is a popular route for cyclists, inline skaters and hikers who seek a paved off-road route through spectacular mountain scenery. The trail runs along Interstate 70 from the resort community of Copper Mountain to the Gore Creek Campground in White River National Forest, just outside of Vail.

East of Vail, the trail begins where Bighorn Road ends, following what used to be US 6 to Vail Pass, a cool 10,554 feet. (Restrooms are available here.) From Vail Pass, the trail descends all the way to Copper Mountain—home of Copper Mountain Resort—which offers a nice stopover for refreshments and a rest.

At the junction of I-70 and State Route 91 on the eastern edge of Copper Mountain, the Vail Pass Recpath
