Goad Springs Trail

Arkansas

Lowell's Goad Springs Trail spans the north–south length of the growing city, offering a connection for residents and visitors to

of the Razorback Regional Greenway, a 46-mile, primarily off-road, shared-use trail that extends from southeast Bella Vista to the southern edge of Fayetteville.

Lowell's Goad Springs Trail spans the north–south length of the growing city, offering a connection for residents and visitors to both Rogers in the north and Springdale in the south. There, trail users can continue their journey on the Pleasant Grove Trail and Silent Grove Trail, respectively.

The trail follows its namesake road for nearly its entire route, although a more scenic stretch veers away from the road to follow and cross Puppy Creek. At its southern end, the trail provides a safe crossing of Interstate 49 via an underpass shared with adjacent Goad Springs Road.

The Goad Springs Trail, along with the Pleasant Grove Trail, Silent Grove Trail and several others throughout Northwest Arkansas, are central components
