The Sacajawea Trail winds along the Yellowstone River in the picturesque mountain town of Livingston. Trailside benches dotting the route allow you to soak up the beautiful views.

A highlight of the journey is passage by Sacajawea Park, where you'll find a bronze statue of Sacajawea on horseback commemorating the day that the Corps of Discovery stopped here in 1806. The park's sweeping grassy areas are popular for picnicking and the local farmers market takes place nearby each summer.

The firm gravel pathway continues east to the Miles Park Athletic Complex, where you'll find baseball fields and the Livingston Civic Center.
