Prairie Creek Greenway

Nestled within the suburban landscape outside Platte City, the Prairie Creek Greenway offers an escape into nature as it runs

Nestled within the suburban landscape outside Platte City, the Prairie Creek Greenway offers an escape into nature as it runs through fields and forests and across the titular creek. The trail gives users the chance to experience a variety of wildlife and tranquil scenery along its well-maintained, paved route.

The main trailhead is located off of State Highway N, and offers parking and a portable toilet. From there, users can head north through open fields and former farmland, or east through more wooded terrain. The trail provides access to the numerous neighboring subdivisions, allowing residents to travel safely off-road and get some outdoor exercise in. The main portion of the trail forms a rough loop, although as of 2016 the northeast end of the trail was not fully connected to complete the loop.

Recent additions to the trail have further increased its utility, as users can now continue from the northwest part of the trail back over to State Highway N and then further north to the small Platte Valley Park, providing access to even more neighborhoods along the way. With a bike repair station, several dog cleanup stations, and some of the best scenery in the area, the Prairie Creek Greenway is quickly becoming a real gem of a trail.
