Pennsy Trail (PA)

Pennsylvania

The Pennsy Trail is a short, but sweet rail-trail located in Haverford Township, to the west of Philadelphia. The trail's proceeds north through quiet neighborhoods before ending at the parking lot for the recently built Haverford Area YMCA. The trail also provides access between Princeton Road and Lincoln Avenue via a short paved path just north of Veterans Park, which offers a great neighborhood connection and provides access to the smaller Bailey Park.

Trail users should be aware that several sections of the trail run through planned or active construction projects; be sure to check the Friends of Haverford Trails website for updates before hitting the trail!

The Pennsy Trail is a short, but sweet rail-trail located in Haverford Township, to the west of Philadelphia. The trail's southern and northern ends are currently broken up by Manoa Road, with the goal being to add a connecting bridge sometime in the future.

The southern section is surfaced with woodchips, and begins in a residential area behind a large LA Fitness complex. The trail heads northwest along the former Newtown Square Rail right of way before reaching Manoa Road. Users should take caution here, as a short steep path provides the only means of descending to cross the road to continue to the northern part of the trail. This portion of the trail was recently upgraded to a macadam surface and is more amenable for biking, as it traverses the lightly wooded corridor along the edge of Veterans Park and
