Hunters Crossing and Brayton Garden Trails

Pennsylvania

The Hunters Crossing and Brayton Garden trails form a paved, multi-use greenway that extends 2.7 miles from the Country Square the planned Northern Bucks County connection and the Liberty Bell Trail, forming a long-distance greenway that will extend from Allentown-Bethlehem to the Philadelphia metro area. It will also form a vital link in the Pennsylvania Highlands Trail, another long-distance path that will extend from the Delaware River to South Mountain.

The Hunters Crossing and Brayton Garden trails form a paved, multi-use greenway that extends 2.7 miles from the Country Square Shopping Center in Quakertown to Dovecote Drive immediately south of Brayton Garden Park. The trails converge at Trumbauersville Road and link several local subdivisions. The trail passes through woodlands on most of its route, providing cool relief from the summer sun. Notable sites include a historical stone home and a large wetland tucked away from the surrounding homes by forests and the ponds in Brayton Garden Park.

Although it currently serves as a community path, the Hunters Crossing/Brayton Garden trails will eventually be joined to the Barrel Run and Unami trails in neighboring Milford Township, the Saucon Rail Trail via
