The Tribute Shoreline Nature Trail is truly one of the most unique trails in all of the Dallas-Fort Worth metroplex. Once you get past the Old American Golf Club practice facilities and farther on the peninsula, you feel like you're in a national park. (Until then, note that the path is shared with golf carts for about the first mile. The netted areas and pylons mark the end of the practice green and the beginning of the fully non-motorized segment of trail). It's so peaceful and beautiful, and always changing with the season for a 'fresh' look every time you're out there. There's also interpretive signage along the way - great teaching opportunities for all ages. There are benches, trash cans and even picnic tables at the tip of the peninsula with an incredible view of the lake.
