the south, it links up with the bike path along Adams St. and by extension, the rest of the Holland metro area trails.

The Upper Macatawa Trail is sited within the stunning natural area of the same name, in Zeeland, Michigan. The trail runs 2.8 miles and offers a sensory as it passes through hardwood forest, verdant meadows, wetlands teeming with life, and bridges overlooking the Macatawa River. In addition to this main trail, there are also several unpaved hiking and mountain biking trails snaking through the 612 acres of the preserve. The park also features scenic overlook decks (a highlight), picnic tables, parking and restrooms. It's a fine place for birding, particularly during the spring and autumn migrations.

While the trail is worth on its own, it's also an important connector in the trail system in this part of western Michigan. To the north, it intersects with the Fred Meijer Kenowa Trail which stretches an additional 9.8 miles. To
