Lincoln Drive Trail

Pennsylvania

Running along the western edge of Wissahickon Creek, the Lincoln Drive Trail winds through Wissahickon Valley Park and offers a Forbidden Drive trailhead.

Running along the western edge of Wissahickon Creek, the Lincoln Drive Trail winds through Wissahickon Valley Park and offers a pleasant route sheltered by trees with views of the water. The 1.6-mile trail is paved and 12-foot-wide. There are also four newly resurfaced connector bridges along the route.

The trail provides a connection between two of Philadelphia's very popular trails. At its southwest trailhead by the mouth of the Wissahickon Creek at Ridge Avenue, the trail meets the Schuylkill River Trail. The Lincoln Trail also provides access into the scenic Wissahickon Valley Park for cyclists from nearby areas like the Manayunk neighborhood and Center City. Just south of its northeast end, the trail connects to the Wissahickon Valley Park Trail at the shared
