Portland's Bayside Trail packs a lot into its 1-mile length. The paved pathway provides a pleasant route between commercial and residential areas in the Bayside and East Bayside neighborhoods. Once an industrialized corridor for the Union Branch Railroad, you'll now find pocket parks, meadows, and gardens.

The rail-trail also skirts the beautifully landscaped grounds of Loring Memorial Park, a tribute to a local fighter pilot. Take a spur trail into the park, where you'll find four, 9-foot-tall granite pillars engraved with the words: spirit, integrity, presence, and heart.

Near Turkey Bridge, on the trail's north end, you can connect to both the Back Cove Trail and Eastern Promenade Trail. History buffs will especially like the latter, which whisks travelers to a railroad museum and Fort Gorges, which was active during the Civil and Spanish-American wars.
