Exposition Line Bike Path

California

The Exposition Line, running from Downtown Los Angeles to Santa Monica, carefully integrates light rail, bikeway, and pedestrian

There is a one-mile gap along the Expo Line Bike Path between National Boulevard (if starting at Culver City and riding west) and Overland Avenue. There is no signage to direct trail users along city streets to the other segment of the bikeway. However, efforts to close the gap continue. It is also worth noting that beyond Culver City, traveling east towards LA, there are no off-road non-motorized facilities; rather cyclists have to use designated on-street bike lanes while pedestrians must keep to sidewalks.

The eastern segment of the trail travels between the Palms metro station and the La Cienega/Jefferson metro station along the same rail-with-trail corridor.

Connections

Near the eastern end of the trail, the trail connects with the Ballona Creek Bike Path.

The Exposition Line, running from Downtown Los Angeles to Santa Monica, carefully integrates light rail, bikeway, and pedestrian facilities. The second phase of the light rail line opened in 2017, completing the journey from Culver City to 17th St and Colorado Avenue in downtown Santa Monica.

About the Route

The Exposition Line Bike Path is an off-road bikeway that travels alongside the newer half of the railway, providing a low-stress transportation and recreation alternative. This east-west rail-with-trail is paved, and open to different kinds of users. The railroad right-of-way is landscaped with a visual feast of native plants.
