The Kling Valley Trail spans just shy of a mile in a leafy, residential area of northwest Washington, DC. The trail opened in June 2017 and is accessible to the neighborhoods of Cleveland Park, Woodley Park, and Mount Pleasant.

About the Route

The paved pathway follows a small brook and traces the route of a former roadway, Kling Road. From Kling Rd. NW, the trail heads downhill alongside the Tregaron Conservancy. A highlight of the route is when the trail passes underneath Connecticut Ave. NW underneath a huge arched bridge.
