The South Trail stretches over 2 miles between Ballina Rd. and New Woodstock in Cazenovia, New York. The trail sits on the former right-of-way of the Lehigh Valley Railroad. The rail-trail takes users through woodland and farmland, with rustic railroad bridges over the two waterways that intersect the trail. The Chittenago Creek bridge is a historic trestle bridge. Walkers, bikers, snowshoers, cross-country skiers and fishermen can freely use the pathway. Equestrians are welcome, but require a permit.

The South Trail is managed by the Cazenovia Preservation Foundation, which oversees 13 miles of trail in Cazenovia.
