Beach is easily accessible from the southern end of the route, and you can continue south on the San Clemente Beach Trail, a much more scenic trail.

Be sure to pack water as the route has very little shade. Although Coast Highway Protected Trail is not particularly scenic, it provides a useful commuting link between the San Clemente Metrolink Station and the southern neighborhoods of Dana Point, including Capistrano Beach.

Paralleling the Pacific Coast Highway (PCH) for 2.5 miles, this route provides pedestrian and bicyclists with a connection between Capistrano Beach and North Beach.

The Coast Highway Protected Trail runs south from the intersection of the PCH & Beach Road to the intersection of the PCH & Camino Capistrano. This section is protected and separated from traffic by concrete barriers. Following a section of the highway known as N El Camino Real, the last third of the trail—continuing seamlessly from PCH & Camino Capistrano to Avenida Estacion—is somewhat more scenic, but no longer has the concrete barriers.

Capistrano Beach Park (35005 Beach Rd, Dana Point) at the northern end has portable restrooms, a basketball court, beach volleyball, and easy beach access. North
