The Village of Sunbury makes its own contribution to the expansive Ohio to Erie Trail with the Sandel Legacy Trail. The trailhead on Columbus and Vernon Street offers an early treat: a model railroad club housed in a reused train depot, which opens once a month to the public. For now, the Sandel rail-trail, (formerly known as the Big Walnut Community Trail) is just over a half-mile long—just good enough for a short out-and-back excursion within a wooded setting where you can spot small wildlife like groundhogs. The Sandel Legacy Trail connects to the Thomas W. Hopper Legacy Trail at the boundary between Sunbury and Galena. There is an additional segment of paved trail between E Cherry and Walnut Streets in Sunbury. Future plans will see it connected to the other portions of the longer trail.
