The Julian Wash Greenway showcases the natural beauty of the Sonoran Desert as it travels from a junction with the Santa Cruz

The Julian Wash Greenway showcases the natural beauty of the Sonoran Desert as it travels from a junction with the Santa Cruz River Park Trail to S. Rita Road in southeastern Tucson. The trail offers views of distant mountains and connects several parks, including the Julian Wash Archaeological Park, which interprets the history of the Hohokam people that once lived in the region.

For much of its route, the main paved trail is paralleled by a soft-surface path for equestrians and joggers. The greenway is also part of a larger trail network called The Chuck Huckelberry Loop, spanning more than 136 miles throughout Tucson and Pima County.
